

MAGAZINES FOR DECEMBER

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE.—A new series of reminiscences, from the pen of the Hon. Andrew D. White, will begin in the December Century, and will cover from 1891 to 1904, with much of the personal life of the great statesman. The magazine is promised of special interest touching the personality of the German emperor, in his first chapter Mr. White has told of his presentation at the German court, the difficulties of an American ambassador in procuring a suitable residence, the embittered feeling in Germany against America in 1891 and during the Spanish war, the policy of the United States in regard to the "open door" in China and the co-operation of Emperor William and the German government by President McKinley's policy, Ambassador White's personal relations with the Spanish-American war, and other matters of much interest.

HARPER'S.—In Harper's Magazine for December Mark Twain, who has recently made a thorough study of the life of Joan of Arc, pays a wonderful tribute to this slight girl whom he calls "by far the most extraordinary person the human race has ever produced."

Sir William Ramsey.—The discoverer of Helium, writes of "Radium and Its Products." Other contributions to this excellent number are: John Luther Long, Robert Loveman, Norman Duncan, Booth Tarkington, Theodore Garrison, Arthur Symonds, Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, William Dean Howells, Mrs. Humphrey Ward, and many others.

THE CENTURY.—The December Century is a Christmas number, indeed, having as appropriate cover in color and no fewer than eighteen titles relating directly to the holiday or to its spirit.

Among these are five pieces of fiction: "Lieberich's Christmas," a pathetic story by John Luther Long; "A Belated Christmas," a story of the Ishmael by Carter Goodloe; "Kerrigan's Christmas Sermon," a humorous story of a sailor ashore, by Frank L. Tucker; "A Misfit Christmas," a "Sonny" monologue, by Ruth McKerny Stuart; and "The Camel of Jesus," by Marguerite Arlin Haman, a story of the Egyptian Quarter of New York, novel in scene and reverent in treatment. Mrs. Kate Whiting Patch contributes a story entitled "The Princess and the Boy," remarkable for its romantic charm. A cartoon drawing for this story is by Maxfield Parrish.

FOUR-TRACK NEWS.—The December number of The Four-Track News, which closes volume VII, is one of the strongest numbers of the magazine yet published. It opens with an article by Glen Alan, entitled "The Life Story of a Lobbyist," in which humor and fact are happily mingled. "An Historic Church," by Helen K. Hoy, tells the story of the noted old St. Peter's at Albany. "Distinguished Alumni" is an article on William and Mary College, by E. B. Borat. "The Mighty Mississippi," by L. K. Becker, tells something of the story of what Horace Greeley called "The King of Rivers." "An American Rhinoceros," by W. H. Richardson, is an article full of human interest, pertaining to the "Pennsylvania Dutch."

THE POPULAR MAGAZINE.—Football furnishes the theme for two of the stories in the December Popular Magazine. "Honorable Marauder's Eleven" and "The Delayed Pass," both of which should prove of exceptional interest to all lovers of sport. Other features to be found in this number are two complete novels: "The Keeper of the Keys," by W. Beall Baldwin, and "In Which O'Rourke Sings His Song," by Louis Joseph Oppenheimer. Richard Marsh, Hugh H. Lusk, Philip C. Stanton and George Parsons Brinckerhoff, nine short stories, including "The Triumph of Happy Jack," a Christmas story of the Flying Dutchman, by B. M. Bower, and eight "Little Stories of the Stage," by Amelia Edgerly, Louis Mann and other noted dramatists. As usual, the cover is handsome and artistic.

THE WORLD TODAY.—It would be hard to find a magazine with a greater variety of topics than those of the World Today for December. In the number and effectiveness of its illustrations, many of which are in color, it is also unequalled among the recent monthlies. A notable feature of this issue is the summary of the achievements of the year 1904, presented in a series of brief papers by such writers as Paul Weston, the new secretary of the navy; W. M. R. French of the Chicago Art Institute; Henry H. Norris, William Morton Payne, C. L. Henderson, Harry Pratt Judson, etc.

SUCCESS.—A beautiful cover design and a varied contents, to which many well known writers have contributed, combine in making the December issue of Success Magazine one of surpassing attractiveness. The leading article, "The Ever-living Miracles of Christendom," by Richard Le Gallienne, recalls to us the magical tales that delighted our childhood fancy. Chaderla, The Sleeping Beauty, Babes in the Woods, Jack the Giant-Killer, Hop-o-my-Thumb, and other heroes and heroines of fairland, are charmingly portrayed by G. Alden Pierson in illustrations accompanying the article. Aspirants to grand opera will find helpful reading in the article, entitled "The American Girl in Opera," by Heinrich Conrad, director of the Metropolitan Opera company, New York.

PEARSON'S.—Pearson's Magazine for December presents the unusually numerous collection of six special articles and eight sparkling pieces of fiction. "The American House of Lords," by David S. Barry, is the leading article, and tells of the perquisites and snoberies of United States senators, as they are to convene on the first Monday of December. This paper is peculiarly timely. A sketch of the philanthropic career of the late Louis Fleischmann relates the history and the details of his world-famous food cans, one of the night sights of New York. Still another timely article is H. P. Burdell's "International Athletics," amply illustrated with photographs. In this story, Mr. Burdell briefly recounts the results of this year's American sporting achievements in competition with England, Canada, Germany and France. The article embraces everything from the defeat of Emperor William's Meteor to the victories of Americans over English track teams and cricket teams, and German bowling teams.

LESLIE'S MONTHLY.—The twenty-one contributions in Leslie's Monthly Magazine for December are as expressive of the spirit of the season as the gay and attractive cover of the magazine itself. In the list of contents is an account by Dr. Grenfell, the famous Labrador missionary, of his work along that coast and of the heroic deeds of the fishermen about the Thetford Syndicate, which takes up the dealings of the critics and playwrights with the trusts, is the best of the series. Besides these, there are eight short stories, by George Hubbard, H. C. Rowland, Margaret Rusby Ship and others, a thrilling account of one of the battles of the Russo-Japanese war told by a Japanese officer, and sketches of Admiral Cervera—our best sailor—Beckman Winthrop, the young governor of Porto Rico, and Prince Mirsky of Russia, as well as a number of shorter articles and verses.

AINSLIE'S.—Ainslie's for December vindicates the promise of the publishers that each number shall excel its predecessor. The novella is, of course, the principal feature. It is called "Her Prairie Knight," and is by B. M. Bower, the action taking place on a Montana ranch. It is a strikingly true picture of that peculiar and fascinating life. Among the fine list of short stories, the notable one is "Voice Offering," by Katherine C. Thurston, whose new book, "The Masquerader," is one of the autumn's literary sensations. It is a very powerful story, worthy of its author. A timely feature of the number is a collection of seven Christmas stories, but interest has not been sacrificed to timeliness in the selection.

SCRIBNER'S.—The Christmas number of Scribner's Magazine is unusually beautiful in its pictures, both in color and black and white, and is filled with sketches and short stories that are not only amusing and entertaining, but are now literature and full of character, as well as adapted to the Christmas season. Especially noteworthy art features are the colored frontispiece, by Maxfield Parrish, the illustrations in color for "Scenes from the Old Ballads," by Beatrice Stevens; the drawings by Walter Appleton Clark, showing Christmas scenes in an old French village; a drawing of a mother and child in colors by Sarah Swire, and the beautiful colored cover by David Ericson. The articles given are well collected, while short fiction is abundant and of great variety.

Roosevelt carried the state of Massachusetts by 8,000 plurality, but William L. Douglas, the Democratic candidate for governor, was elected by 35,000 plurality. Mr. Douglas' explanation of this extraordinary result is summed up in the following sentences: "Publicity and a real issue. Advertising made my business pay and I used it to the limit in arousing and directing the sentiment which I knew to be widespread on the subject which was our chief issue—reciprocity and tariff relief." Mr. Douglas' business advertisements have made his face, his name, and the articles which he manufactures, known from one end of the country to the other. Mr. Douglas' political advertisements have made him governor of Massachusetts. Never has there been a more signal proof of the value of advertising. There is an evolution in progress in the method of conducting campaigns. Advertising is to be employed to a greater extent than ever before. Printer's ink is to take the supreme place heretofore occupied by the stump speaker.

A Modern Juliet.

(Detroit Free Press.) They called her Juliet so green she was. Her golden hair and lovely, sinful eyes Made many youth sigh to be Romeo. When off at eve she gazed at moonlit skies. By day, too, was she less fair to see. No dainty, tender, and air-like Juliet. No gallant knew her but to bend the knee And pledge him ever ready at her call. Till one day when at dinner quick she appeared. A smile—for the largest she could spy—and sighed: "I always love the man right after pie."

MANTELS!
MANTELS!

HERE is nothing that adds to the attractiveness of the "best room" like a beautiful mantel. It gives tone and caste to the whole house. All white walls look alike, but there is a vast difference in mantles. A good mantel costs money, and you feel like you just can't afford it while the expense of building is so great.

Next week you can buy a mantel that will be a pleasure to you all your life at—

Half Price.

OUR LAST WEEK'S ad. brought a most liberal response. All week long we were busy. Many came to take advantage of the Half Price offering we made and $12,400.00 in merchandise walked out of the Store.

The buying was not confined to any particular line, for the selections were general. Next week the bargains will be just as great as during the past week and the near approach of the Holidays augurs well for a

Record Breaking Bargain Week.

And Everything Usually Found in a FIRST CLASS HARDWARE STORE Is Here and for

ONE HALF PRICE.

KITCHEN UTENSILS!

SO MANY little conveniences are made for the kitchen that cost so little and save so much time, but the economical housewife says, "I can do without it," and she slaves along with a broken egg beater, a tinkered up flour sifter and loses time and patience. The cost is always small enough, goodness knows, but next week these conveniences can be had for—

Half Price.

Mechanics' Tools!

IN THIS department we have always striven to please the workman who likes to use good tools. A carpenter's kit is his fortune. He prides himself on using the best, and it is no little task for the average man to secure just the tools he wants. Price stands in the way, and he feels that he cannot afford them just now. Well, he cannot afford now not to have them for they will be sold next week at Half Price.

Stoves, Ranges

EVER SEEN our line of Stoves and Ranges? We carry the most complete line in the City. We bought them new this season for the winter's trade, and they all go with the rest of the stock.

THE BORN STEEL RANGE and others of the Good ones will be offered all next week at—

HALF PRICE.

Builders' Hardware!

THE most complete line and full variety to choose from in builders' hardware has always been our aim. We can furnish your new home complete from top to bottom—Door Locks and Plates, Hinges, Window Fasteners, Weights and Pulleys, and everything used in a new home.

Our prices have always been low, but next week buy from our complete line at—

Half Price.
